The distribution of Gifts will take place immediately after the close of the grand concert of the "Opera House," and in full view of the audience, under the immediate supervision of the President and Directors of the VUE DE L'EAU COMPANY, and the following persons, who kindly consented to be present and see that the gifts are properly distributed as advised:

John B. Lindlow, Mayor of Norfolk, Hon. A. S. Waits, Mayor of Portsmouth, Col. Walter H. Taylor, of Norfolk, John B. Whitehead, Ex-Mayor of Norfolk.

James G. Holliday, Esq., of Portsmouth, Capt. William Lamb, President First National Bank, Norfolk.

G. V. D. Grover, General Agent Boston Steamship Co.; Nathaniel Burruss, Son & Co., Washington Reed, Esq., of Peters & Reed Merchants.

E. G. Gray, Esq., Superintendent Seaboard and Atlantic Railroad.

Robert J. Neely, Esq., of R. & W. Neely & Co.

Marshall Parks, Esq., President Albemarle & Chesapeake Canal Company.

E. C. Lindsey, Esq., Real Estate Broker, William C. White, Esq., Attorney at Law, Norfolk.

The distribution will be by blindfolded persons or children, from two wheels, one of which will contain gifts on printed slips sealed in envelopes, and the other wheel containing tickets, before it, — thus preventing the numbers and gifts being publicly announced — until the whole four hundred and one gifts are distributed.

Those who will only see there can there be no fraud, collusion, or knowledge of what gift any number will get.

Should the ticket holder sell his ticket, the same will be sold when the same is off, the presents will be distributed in proportion to the number sold.

It is hoped the public will promptly respond to this effort to establish upon a firm basis a delightful resort during the heated months.

LOCAL MATTER.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

E. F. Page and lady arrived in the city a few days since.

Notwithstanding the rain business was quite brisk with the cotton men yesterday.

A cabbage weighing 14 lbs raised on a truck farm near this city, was sold at the market yesterday.

See the advertisement elsewhere of Messrs. R. B. Andrews & Co., clothiers whose stock of clothing is thorough and complete.

The Treasurer of the Penitentiary Board of Directors yesterday drew from the State Treasurer $6,000 for the support of Convicts of that Institution.

The fare to the Wilmington Fair will be from this city $6 for the round trip. Tickets sold on and after to morrow during the Fair, at the Central Depot.

Jonathan Harris, Esq., commission merchant and dealer in grain, fish, fertilizing lime, &c., Craven street, Newbern, advertises in another column. He refers to several leading men in this city.

The Epiphany continues to excite our citizens, stock owners especially. We have nothing new to report from the malady. But few new cases; none have proved fatal, and those attacked improving. The weather is bad and favorable for the spread of the disease.

We have received from J. H. Ennis, Bookseller and Stationer, Fayetteville street, a copy of Turner's N. C. Almanac for 1873. This issue is a decided improvement on that of 1872, containing a great deal of general information useful to all and every one.

OUR CHURCHES TO-DAY.—Divine services will be held at the following Churches to day, (Sunday). Strangers and others in the city are earnestly and cordially invited to attend. Gentleman ushers will be present to conduct visitors to pews which are always free:

Edenton Street Methodist Church, Edenton street, Rev. A. W. Mangum, officiating. Services at 11 o'clock a. m. and 7<sup>o</sup> clock p. m.

Baptist Church, corner Salisbury and Edenton streets, Rev. Robert Burwell, D. D. officiating. Services at 11 o'clock a. m. and 7<sup>o</sup> clock p. m.

Christ's (Episcopal) Church, Wilmington street, Rev. R. S. Mason, D. D. officiating, services at 11 o'clock a. m. and 7<sup>o</sup> clock p. m.

Person Street Methodist Church, Person street, Rev. Mr. Rivers officiating. Services at 11 o'clock a. m. and 7<sup>o</sup> clock p. m.

The object of the enterprise is to raise means by which to complete the VUE de L'EAU property, and to make it in every respect a first-class watering place.

Educate your ministers, educate your children, and these dangerous foes can be met.

Dr. Pritchard followed Mr. Heden in support of the same, making one of the most powerful appeals we ever listened to, comparing our own institution of learning with those of other States, and calling upon the delegates present, in the name of A. M. Poindexter, who while living, even raised his eloquent voice in behalf of education, and now dead, his example calls us "on to the work." In the name of James McDaniel, who with such dignity and such affection once presided over the Convention, and whose heart was full of the great cause of education; in the name of M. T. Yates, our great Missionary and the man of such great liberality of heart, and who had by his great brain done so much in evangelizing the heathen world, and in the name of every interest near and dear to us, to take hold of this work and dear to us, a determination that it shall succeed.

Hon. John Kerr, in support of the same resolutions, also made a powerful and earnest appeal, in which he said there was scarcely ever any great enterprise to be undertaken, in which the Baptist were not called into action, and being called, acted. He had no doubts about the success of the undertaking, if adopted. That three humble, obscure Baptists, Carey, Ryland and Andrew Fuller, in 1792, inaugurated an enterprise for the redemption of the whole heathen world. He said that Henry Ward Beecher was one of the greatest humbugs on this earth, and being the powerful-brained man that he was, was most to be dreaded by Christians, in deluding the uneducated—that infidelity, in the guise of Christian in the church, was what was most to be dreaded, not Catholicism nor any other ism; secure this endowment, give the teachers there the means of teaching, and you'll have cause to rejoice in your labors and to be proud of your College. He appealed to the ladies present and through them to the ladies of the State to engage in this work as they hope to see their husband and their sons men of influence.

After some further remarks by Rev. I. W. Babbs, Dr. McDowell, Jordan, W. H. Avera, and others, the resolutions were adopted.

The hospitality of this people is unbounded. Nothing has been left undone to entertain every delegate in the most cordial manner.

The Convention will adjourn on Sunday night.

AT WORK.—The Executive Committee of the State Agricultural Society, having secured from the city a start of $20,000 with permission to purchase and locate new grounds, are now at work prospecting for the same. We are pleased to know that thoroughly and enterprising men are at the helm and are steering their course all right. We shall have new grounds, new houses, all in accordance with the latest designs and modern improvements, a full attendance of the members is desired.

RALEIGH ARTICLES AT THE WELDON FAIR.—Mrs. M. Schloss, of this city, received premiums at the Weldon Fair for a beautiful heart ring and a collar.

Mr. J. R. H. Carter, of this city, had on exhibition there a box of his elegant baking powders, which attracted much attention.

TICKETS ONLY $5 EACH.

BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION.

SECOND DAY.

TWO HUNDRED DELEGATES PRESENT.

ENDOWMENT OF WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

The Hospitality of the Citizens of Fayetteville.

(Reported especially for the DAILY NEWS by its own Reporter.)

FAYETTEVILLE, Nov. 8th, 1872.

Every train brings in large numbers of delegates until the number has already reached two hundred or more.

The report of the missionaries on yesterday, who have been engaged in disseminate fields of the State during the past year, show that over seven thousand persons were admitted into the Baptist denomination since the last session of the convention.

Dr. H. C. Toy, of Greenville Theological Seminary, and Rev. C. T. Bailey, of Warrenton, delivered powerful addresses on the subject of ministerial education last night, to one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Fayetteville.

The Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College recommended to the convention an endowment of one hundred thousand dollars for that institution, to be raised during the present year.

Rev. J. C. Hiden, Pastor of the first Baptist Church in Wilmington, made a powerful appeal in behalf of the recommendation, saying it is to be called "College let it be one in truth."

He said it was a common idea among some of our people that the Catholics had the best schools in the land, and that their Priests were the best educated men in the pulpit. A greater mistake was never entertained. The fact is, they have really very few schools of first grade and but few really educated Priests. Because a man stood and repeated Latin to a people that did not know one word of Latin, was no evidence of that man's being educated. He visited a Catholic church on St. Patrick's Day, not long since, expecting to hear something entertaining—that the service was all in Latin, so called, except the sermon, and to his astonishment he could not tell what the Priest was saying.

The Epiphany continues to excite our citizens, stock owners especially.

We have nothing new to report from the malady. But few new cases; none have proved fatal, and those attacked improving. The weather is bad and favorable for the spread of the disease.

SAM'L T. WILLIAMS, Political Editor.

VANCE AT WAKE FOREST.

Yesterday we gave our readers some extracts from first part of Gov. Vance's address at Wake Forest College. Those extracts embraced the premises of the oration, and we proceed to day to give the general conclusions of the distinguished speaker, our space being too limited to make such copious quotations as we would like.

After alluding to the struggles of the English people against the iron handed Plantagenets and Tudors, or the false and fickle Stuarts, "to preserve the great rights of Magna Charta, and the constant warfare that has been since going on throughout the world between freedom and despotism, the speaker then discusses the great problem of free government, which seems to "be the right and nice proportion between the liberty of the individual citizen and the well-being of the community." He thinks the legislative branch of our government has become aggressive, and is rapidly absorbing and consuming its co-ordinates, the executive and judicial departments.

"It now holds them in the hollow of its hand, and if not checked will reduce them to a state of the most abject dependence."

He adds:

"Already many of their cherished prerogatives have been swept away; and it would seem, indeed, that the system of checks and balances so anxiously prepared by our founders is like to prove utterly insufficient. A Legislative despotism, therefore, appears to me, at this moment, to be one of the greatest of the dangers which threaten us. And as under our system there is scarcely any other practical way of providing additional salutary restraints to our fundamental law, except by means of the very authors of the evil, the danger appears greater still. Being the representatives of the people they more easily secure indemnity for their inroads upon popular rights, by flattering the multitude and becoming panthers to the destroying lust of national glory; a passion which, skilfully fed, will blind a people's eyes to more infractions of individual right than any other in the breasts of men."

It should not be forgotten that each and every one of these principles, established by our fathers for the defence of their liberties, must be maintained in its integrity or the whole fabric may fall. The breach in the dikes once opened, and not speedily closed, the long waves of desolation rush in and overwhelm the land. The first innovation must be resisted with the same promptitude and resolution as the last."

Another great danger is to be found in the prevalence of "all those ambitions, desires and pursuits which distract popular attention from the cardinal maxim of incessant watchfulness, which is as essential as trite to the preservation of their liberties. The most philosophical historians and politicians of modern times, Hallam, DeTocqueville, Montesquieu, Guizot, Hume, Gibbon and others, all agree with singular unanimity, in pointing out the love of glory and national greatness as one of the surest and most deadly foes of liberty."

The next danger referred to is the wide expanse of our territory. He shows that Mr. Madison, in combatting this year of extended territory had reference to the idea of its weakening our power against external forces, and not to the danger within of centralization and loss of individual rights.

The dangers of geographical expansion are also pointed out. Allusion is made to the blind zeal exhibited by the people of the North to preserve the territorial integrity of the country, for which more attachment seemed to be exhibited than for the preservation of the great American Magna Charta—the Constitution." He adds:

"Such has been the inflammation of passions in this desire, that during the late struggle, and long since its termination, almost every principle of liberty formerly held sacred by American statesmen has received some dangerous stab under the pretext of political necessity."

While the science of government is progressive, it must keep in view the elementary principles of the Creed, "and be pursued with the unselfish zeal of pure patriotism."

The speaker then discusses the question as to how much of the spirit of genuine freedom is to be found in the rapid progress of the country in territorial expansion, wealth, military strength, the arts and sciences, railroads, and all the elements of physical greatness. He shows that although Rome once possessed the best part of the civilized world, liberty perished in the palaces of the Cæsars, and that although Russia now claims sway over the seventh part of the whole earth, "her name and absolute despotism are one and convertible." He adds: "We are making rapid strides in the accumulation of wealth, but we should never cease to remember that liberty is of poor and lonely birth, and languishes by too much contact with the rich."

The hardy Greeks on the barren shores of Athens, and the Spartans on their sterile plains, built around their freedom and their cities walls of naked human bodies which all the countless hosts of Xerxes could not pass. Philip's mule, with its golden head, entered the gates in triumph."

The speaker does not think our five institutions are to be perpetuated by erecting vast piles or the building of mighty cities:

"The Babylonish and Egyptian Empires filled the world with wonders of this kind; but we can draw no cumulative inspiration from the scarcely perceptible remaining traces of the cities and monuments of Nimrod and Semiramis. The Pyramids, themselves, in all their astonishing grandeur, are only eloquent of the miserable slavery which created them."

The speaker does not think that fostering the growth of magic cities tends to promote the real objects of free government, for Asia, "cruel, despotic, effeminate," can boast of populous cities, in which the human race is packed in dense multitudes. Nor do our railroads, on which we boast with just reason, illustrate anything "more than our energy, wealth and progress in the practical sciences." They speak no lesson of the true for genuine freedom, although they have no opposing significance. Austria, Russia and Turkey can boast equally with the United States in this respect.

Neither can learning and intelligence preserve the free institutions of our fathers. "Educated men are no more always virtuous than ignorance is always wicked." The speaker believes "educated bad men in all ages, have done more hurt to the world than all the ignorance that has ever existed."

"The noblest orator, and the greatest poet, of the Augustan age of Roman letters died in the glorification of despotism and venality. The polite reign of Charles II rotted England to the core, and laid her liberties so low that only revolution and a change of dynasty could revive them. When the Goddess of Reason was enthroned in France, the Goddess of Liberty died instinctively as from the face of a favored rival; and a despotism—the worst that ever cursed any land—a despotism of the mob—gaunt and bloody—loomed up at the side of this throne of Intelligence—"its dark and overshadowing, and most proper, Aegia."

The rude, unlettered Goths, whose flocks and wagons followed them through the primal forests, and who elevated a comrade upon their shields to make him, with that slight ceremony, their master, had far more real liberty than is vouchsafed to their descendants by the crooked slate of their Bismarcks and their Beusts."

The speaker's idea about all this is: "That it is in the progress only, in the knowledge of, and reverence for, these things which pertain to freedom purely, that we can hope to remain free. The knowledge of all things else, whatsoever, will not help to this end unless this better knowledge, and the tone of the true principles of human liberty, progress and keep pace with the rest."

"The chief end of all good government is the freedom of the citizen and the safe enjoyment of his property, subject to the rights of others and the public needs; and any institution—any development—which tends not directly or indirectly, to these ends is useless, or, more likely, hurtful."

The present condition of the United States, "with reference to the temptations and the tendencies of our countrymen," is then glanced at, its "three millions of square miles of the richest soil on the globe, washed by thirty miles of sea, watered by the mightiest rivers, walled upon the East and West by the two oceans, and grasping North and South, the geographical circles which encompass the temperate zones"—all of which great natural advantages of our country demonstrate "the very highest favor of God to its inhabitants temporally, and of His highest permissions, spiritually and intellectually."

The might and wealth of a government become truly glorious only as it is sacredly administered for the purpose of protecting the liberties of men. Any strength beyond this in the national arm must needlessly be taken from the citizen's, and to his danger and hurt.

"Why then should we glory in the might and strength of our government; unless we, as individuals, proportionately share in and enjoy that strength? What do we care for armories, and navies, and engines of war, and the skill to make the most of them all, if our bodies may be seized and shut up in dungeons contrary to the forms and the spirit of the law? If our property can be taken from us without our consent through representation, what care we for great railroads, mighty cities, and submarine cables? If, after the manner of "good men and true" our fathers fought with the beasts of kingly oppression, and overcame them, and afterwards, the obstacles of nature, and erected this Imperial Republic to the wonder and envy of the world, what advantage is it to us, if the right of trial by jury—an honest and impartial jury—be dead, and rise not again?

If, in short, the meanest citizen in all this land cannot instantly command for his protection in the commonest, simplest personal right, the entire physical and moral weight of the Republic, then, indeed, is its glory but the false gilding and glamour which dazzles and deludes, and is no more entitled to your reverence and attachment than is the autocratic splendor of the Czar or the idle magnificence of the Grand Turk."

The speaker thinks that the South is becoming the slave of the same ideas and pursuits concerning material developments which have caused the North to lose sight of those simple tenets which are the basis of our freedom. He advises his hearers to study the principles of liberty and law—to "seek first the freedom of the citizen; secure it by unsuspensible laws, administer them by 'inexhaustible' Judges, enforce it by Chief Executives who comprehend and respect the Constitution; achieve but these, and all other good things shall be added thereto."

Gov. Vance concludes his remarks by a beautiful tribute to Christianity, which we will publish in full in our next issue.

CARRY THE NEWS TO O'CONOR.

O'Connor received one vote in Charlotte. —Exchange.

We congratulate the Charlotte Bulletin on the above flattering intelligence.

The Bulletin worked hard for O'Connor. It filled its columns with the bitter things Mr. Greeley said against Democracy. The editor of that paper with Flannery and Isbell, held a Straight Out Convention at Charlotte and put forth an O'Connor Electoral ticket. The Bulletin put the names of O'Connor and Adams at its masthead, and urged their claims with great zeal and spirit. And yet when the votes are counted at Charlotte, the Bulletin's candidate received the astonishing number of one vote for President!

Now, the question is, who voted for O'Connor at Charlotte? It will not do to say that the editor of the Bulletin cast that ballot, for if that be so, it will be an acknowledgment that that paper had no earthly influence, and could not control a single individual.

Neither will it do to say that the Editor of the Bulletin did not vote for O'Connor, for that will be equivalent to saying that he "went back" on the Straight Out movement, and refused to support his own candidate.

In this dilemma we will not venture an opinion as to whether or not the vote was cast by the Editor of the Bulletin, but will content ourselves by announcing that Charlotte, the home of Britton, gave one vote for Charles O'Connor for President.

Only one, and nothing more!

THE EVILS OF DISORGANIZATION.

One of the evils of disorganizers is seen in the result of the Tennessee election.

Andrew Johnson opposed the regular Democratic candidate for Congressmen for the State at large, and thus secured the election of the notorious Radical Maynard.

The Democrats could have carried Tennessee by from forty to fifty thousand majority but for the personal ambition and trickery of Andrew Johnson. By his officiousness he has defeated Gen. B. F. Cheatham, a good and true man, and a gallant Confederate officer.

Tennessee votes for Greeley of course, but our party there is disorganized and dispirited on account of Johnson and his followers.

THE DAILY APPEAL.

We welcome with much pleasure to our exchange list, the Petersburg Daily Appeal, which succeeds the Daily Progress. The new Editor, A. B. Venable, Esq., recently conducted the Commonwealth, at Farmville, with decided ability and energy. He is a forceful and vigorous writer and will win fresh laurels in the wider field of journalism which he has chosen.

Mr. Venable is a relative of our distinguished fellow citizen, Hon. Abram W. Venable, of Granville County.

The Daily Appeal has our warmest wishes for a long career of usefulness and prosperity.

BE AT YOUR POSTS!

We respectfully urge upon the Democratic members elect to the Legislature the importance of being at their posts on Monday, the 18th, the first day of the session.

The work of organizing the two houses of the Legislature is of very great importance. The Radicals will be hand to a man, and will take every advantage of the absence of our members. We have a good working majority, but it is not sufficiently large for any Democrats to be absent at roll-call the first day of the session.

FEARFUL SCENE IN BALTIMORE—A WOMAN ATTACKED BY A FEROCIOUS BUGGY. Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock, a bull owned by Mr. Snyder, which was being driven through Lombard street, Baltimore, by two colored men, became unmanageable, causing passers-by to give him a wide berth. Just before reaching Broadway the enraged animal made a dash at a lady, Mrs. Louise Whitecraft, who was endeavoring to cross the street, and catching her with his horns tossed her into the air six feet, and as she fell, trampled her before his feet. Several policemen and others ran to the assistance of the injured woman, who was picked up in an insensible condition by Policeman Peter and Hickman and conveyed to her residence, near by, on Broad street. The frenzied animal, after his terrible onslaught, dashed along Lombard street, followed by a crowd of men, who fired pistols at him as he ran, until at the corner of Central avenue he fell from his wounds, loss of blood and exhaustion.

A colored man, John Henderson, then dispatched him with an axe. He was found to have been struck with the pistol bullets twenty times. The carriage was removed by the owner, Mrs. Whitecraft was attended by Dr. Dwindle, who found the unfortunate lady so terribly gored in the arm and leg that the chances for her recovery were very slight, but her condition has improved, and she is now believed to be out of danger.

The Dramatic Company of Richmond, Va., has engaged the Opera House at Wilmington during the next week.

The Rocky Mount Reporter for the Roanoke News says that Jesse H. Powell, Esq., has purchased Col. Hinton's farm in Edgecombe for $21,000.

The Battleboro Advertiser says that Mr. J. R. Moore, of Nash, has this year made 75 bales of cotton on 75 acres of land. Pretty good for Nash.

The Rev. S. S. Norwood, of the Protestant Episcopal church, will preach on Enfield on the second Sunday in each month, at 7 o'clock, p.m.

The Tarboro Southerner has it's masthead the star spangled banner bottom upwards, with the words attached, "Imperial ticket, Ulysses S. Grant, Emperor for So-called."

HALIFAX Court, Judge Watts presiding, has been in session during the past week. Two capital cases are on the State docket. We notice in attendance from Raleigh Messrs. W. R. Cox, B. F. Moore, Jos. B. Batchelor, F. H. Bushee and T. P. Devoreux.

The Wilson Collegiate Institute, under the management of Prof. Sylvester Hassell, has 90 students. The professor has adopted an excellent idea; his reading room can be found a large number of valuable books and forty periodicals, including dailies, weeklies, monthlies and quarterlies.

The Roanoke News tells of more burglars in that section. The house of Mr. William Lee, in Northampton, was entered a few nights since and robbed of money and plate to the value of $175. The movements of the thief were so stealthy that the robbery was not discovered until next morning.

The Winston Sentinel says that one of the jurors selected by Deputy Marshal Masten to represent Forsyth county in the Federal Court at Greensboro, took the money he received for his public services and traveled West in company with one of his neighbor's daughters leaving a wife and several children behind, four of them sick.

A YADKIN correspondent sends the Winston Sentinel the following, which is "some pumpkins."

"As an agricultural item, please state in your paper that Wm. Sherman, of Yadkin county, raised a pumpkin this season which weighs 92 pounds; and that S. T. Speer, Esq., of same county, has one nine feet and three inches in circumference. Can Stokes or Forsyth beat this?"

The following letter written by Hon. John Manning, of Chatham county, in answer to a letter of enquiry concerning the mineral interests of that section, will be found of interest:

1st. A company from Canada has purchased the iron property in Chatham, known as Ore Hill, and intends operating largely.

2nd. Egypt, a coal property on the river, is opened and worked by A. J. Darbyshire of Philadelphia, Pa.

3d. The property on the north side of Deep River opposite Egypt, known as the Taylor property, has been leased by a company in Tennessee.

4th. What is known as Endor, below Egypt, is owned by Geo. G. Lobdell and others, of Wilmington, Del. (the celebrated car wheel manufacturers) and they are now preparing to make pig iron.

5th. Lockville, in Chatham, is owned by Deep River Iron Company, composed partly of North Carolinians and partly by gentlemen from the North, and possesses more water power than any place on the river. The owners propose erecting foundries, &c.

6th. Buckhorn, in Chatham, on the Cape Fear River, is owned by Lobdell and others, and here they are at work, putting up forges, rolling mills and all other machinery necessary to make car wheels.

7th. A shaft has been put in at a place known as Parrish's to work coal.

8th. A shaft has been put in on the La Grange, or P. E. Evans property.

COTTON is selling in Weldon at 164½ cents.

FIVE couples from Virginia have recently been married in Weldon.

A SHOVEL factoring factory is soon to be established in Weldon. So says the news.

AT the late Weldon Fair a special premium of a cotton press, offered by Messrs. Tappay, Lumson & Co., of Petersburg, Va., was awarded to L. B. Manning, of Halifax county, for the two best bales of cotton on exhibition.

The Asheville Pioneer, speaking of the death of Mrs. Lusette Chamberlain, wife of A. G. Chamberlain, and daughter of C. M. Howe, who fell a victim to consumption, says: "They had been married but two weeks, but the husband knew when he plighted his vows with her at the altar, that death had let its seal upon his bride, and would, ere long, tear her from his embrace. For two long years had their vow been plighted, but ere their fond vows could be consummated, the harvester, Death, entered his father's household, and removed a kind mother and son after an elder sister."

The Wilmington Star of Friday gives the following account of a desperate fight between two colored women of that city: "Yesterday evening, about 7 o'clock, a difficulty originated at the house of one Needham Arp, colored, residing at the mouth of Thompson's Alley, on Brunswick street, North of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, between two colored women named, respectively, Emma Arp and Della Robinson, during which the latter seized a stick of wood and dealt the former several severe and dangerous blows on the head and face with it. The stricken woman was taken to the Dispensary of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where her wounds were dressed by Dr. H. S. Norcom. Among the severe cuts received is one on the top and side of the head, which may prove fatal. After her wounds had received the proper attention she was conveyed to her home, she being very weak from loss of blood.

Della Robinson, the woman who inflicted the blows, was subsequently arrested by an officer of the police force and lodged in the Guard House, there to await the result of the injuries received by the wounded woman.

We learn that jealousy was at the bottom of the difficulty.

When Woman Wills—How she got Married in Spite of her Mother.

A good deal of excitement prevails in the vicinity of South Dayton, Chautauqua county, over the elopement of Adelbert Baker with Miss Addie Putney. Baker is a young man hailing from about Gowanda, and Miss Putney was a resident of Cherry creek, the county line. On the day of the elopement Baker called at the Putney residence with horse and buggy, and called for Miss Addie. He was told that she was at a neighbor's. He hired thither, found her, and brought her home. On entering the house she told her mother she was about to leave with Baker and "get married." The old lady remonstrated, saying she should not, and the girl saying she would—Which would have conquered, but for the interference of Baker, is uncertain, but probably the young lady, Baker caught hold of the old lady and held her closely until Addie could "pick up" some clothing and reach the buggy, when he released his ri et armis and made rapidly for the buggy, bidding an affectionate adieu to "mother." The old folks at home have heard nothing from the fugitives since the occurrence, but presume they found some congenial Greta Green, were made "on flesh," and are indulging in the felicities of married young life. Baker is twenty-four years of age and Miss Putney fifteen.—Chautauqua (N. Y.) News.

INDEED YOU WILL LOOK VERY BLUE.

When you walk down the street, by the side of a friend,
And ask him, with a confident air,
If he has in his pocket a dollar to lend,
As you have no money to buy
The things you desire, as often he will,
Or if he declares unto you,
That he hath not the money to pay off your bill,
Indeed you will look very blue!

When you sit with a pretty girl's hand in your own,
And she has a pretty girl's eye,
Should she answer your words with an eye gazing down,
Or speak with such accent a sigh—
All then, if she kicks you, it will be a kick,
After piercing your heart through and through,
As you lay your head and bid her good night,
Indeed you will look very blue!

As you gaze on those verses, the work of a while sending them off to the press—
You marvel that honor is purchased so dear.
And mark it may seem I confess,
But to learn that your lines were consigned to the flame,
As you scan the vile newspapers through,
Though the editors boast neither learning nor fame,
Indeed you will look very blue!
